

EBS 2017

Europe: the way forward

A Business Contribution

60 years of Europe: Time for a new narrative?

It is no secret that Europe is currently facing unprecedented challenges. The remaining consequences of the 2008 financial crisis, terrorist attacks, international turmoils, migration flows and Brexit are just some of the developments affecting our continent. Without firm actions and concrete solutions, the European Union fails to live up to its citizen's expectations. More than ever before, questions rise as to whether the EU institutions and policies are still sufficiently adapted to manage current disruptions and foster new strategies.

2017 marks the 60th anniversary of the Treaty of Rome, establishing the European Community. The celebration provided the opportunity to reflect on the European Union achievements and the path to be taken in the future; a future that the EU can only embrace through working hand in hand with the driving force of its economy, the business community. Companies are part of the solution and play a central role in generating growth and employment. An open and constructive dialogue on Europe's strengths and weaknesses as well as the rapid and unpredictable pace at which our world is evolving is essential to pave the way to a better future for citizens.

Business leaders survey

The European Business Summit 2017 will gather business leaders, EU and national policymakers, representatives of the civil society together with research organisations for two days of exchange and intensive debates. Besides setting up various types of sessions covering urgent pending matters facing Europe, the EBS will publish the results of a survey, in partnership with McKinsey Global Institute (MGI), providing a business perspective on Europe's future.

Concrete outcomes

After each session, EBS will publish sectorial reports, set up by knowledge partners and that will be distributed to participants and EU institutions. Contribution and expertise from businesses, academics and think tanks are therefore much welcome.

Discussants will be invited to actively take part in the Q&A session after the panel discussion between the participants.

1) The Future of Healthcare

“The Impact of Digital”

🕒 Timing: 22nd of May, 11h00-12h15

📍 Room: Hall of Mirrors

Topic:

- Over the past few years, the health industry has changed profoundly and need to become future-proof. With the rise of digitalisation and an aging population and associated chronic diseases, the health industry has been disrupted by several changes. The challenges are well recognised, but the question is what the EU can collectively advance to address it together with its Member States. One significant part of being future-proof is about health prevention and promotion throughout the Member States. Is this at risk of becoming increasingly neglected in today’s healthcare systems?
- Can E-Health and integrated care be a game-changer in healthcare systems to benefit of patients? Under what circumstances are systems integrating digital technology intelligently? With the arrival of e-Health being one significant example. Many other changes and inventions will be arising in the next 20 years. How will our healthcare system develop over this time? There is a clear recognition of the benefits of integrated care in terms of connectedness, impact on prevention and promotion, but there is a clear need of a new structure. How can the EU be adapted to this new system without downsizing the European welfare system?

2) Europe's Trade Strategy

New Trade Deals for Europe

🕒 Timing: 22nd of May, 15h00-16h30

📍 Room: Hall of Mirrors

- Topic: With new foreign policy agendas such as “America First” and “Global Britain”, it is clear the future EU-27 is in need of a new geopolitical and trade strategy. While European leaders tend to playing safe on its future, European businesses seek the support to bolster the economy. With the US moving closer towards protectionism and Asia taking centre-stage in the international trade market, Europe needs to position itself in this new world order. The question is now on how policy makers can strategically coordinate to establish a European economic diplomacy to generate new market opportunities for businesses.
- Keywords: Trade, Foreign Policy, Emerging Markets, Economic Diplomacy, Asia, Brexit, USA

📍 Room: Arenberg

- Topic: Together with ENISA, this session will showcase that security is a central component of business continuity and citizen's trust. The ever-evolving cyber landscape comes with challenges that businesses have to be very flexible in order to deal with them. The EU is investing in this field to become a strong player and is stimulating the cooperation between different sectors such as energy, health, transport, and finance. What needs to be done with the collection and protection of data for both businesses and customers? Does encryption provide enough security for them? What is the EU's overall view on cross-border access to electronic evidence?

4) A Net Zero Emission Economy

“Invest & Innovate in the Future of Sustainable Energy”

🕒 Timing: 23rd of May, 10h45-12h15

📍 Room: Sax

- Topic: Within a newly established global environment, the EU Energy Union Governance is facing the challenge to find a resilient and secure energy system. A secure energy system comes along with finding and creating green energy solutions. The goal is now to attain a net zero emission economy throughout Europe with the Clean Energy Package. At the same time, the EU's global leadership on Climate Change will hinge on its ability to deliver on the cost-effective deployment of renewable energy and to meet its ambitious target on energy efficiency. With still a great dependency on exhaustible and nuclear energy, the EU has still a long way to go. With a need of a clean energy transition, this session will focus in particular on the technological solutions to meet the emissions lowering challenge.

5) How to Develop an Industrial Strategy for Europe?

The future of EU's industry in the coming decade

🕒 Timing: 23rd of May, 14h30-15h45

📍 Room: Sax

- Topic: Europe's industries are responding to the challenge of increasing global economic competition and to the emergence of new, often disruptive technologies, many of which they have themselves been at the forefront of developing. Digitisation, automation and breakthroughs in life and materials science offer great growth opportunities for Europe's companies in the transition to a 'smart, green' economy. But they also challenge those unable to rise to the innovation challenge and pose wider ethical and social questions too. It is no surprise that countries within and beyond Europe are actively developing their own industrial strategies to win the global competition for leadership in the new economy. And there is a vibrant debate on what this all means for the employment and skills market. European policy-makers must also urgently weigh up how to enable the companies of the future to develop rapidly, building on Europe's industrial strengths and track-record at the same time as meeting the 'grand challenges' facing not just its economy but also its society and natural environment. What framework do businesses need to enable innovation, to turn novel ideas into successful commercialisation? And what role for the EU, its member states, regions and cities, and social partners, in such a complex process?

6) Tapping the potential of the E-Commerce Market for Europe

“The Best Possible Scenario for the Digitalisation of the Internal Market”

🕒 Timing: 23rd of May, 14h30-15h45 (TBC)

📍 Room: Arenberg

- Topic: The digitalisation of industries comes with a necessity for continuous development and adaptation to this strategy. As there is the belief that the unification of the European single market could restore growth and the global competitiveness of the EU, there is a need to invest time and finances in these innovative, digital projects. With a strong focus on the rise of E-Commerce and the online purchase market, European citizens and companies need to take into account its sustainability factor, but also the supply chain challenges, which can limit the growth factor of the E-Commerce industry.
- The rise in E-Commerce and digitalisation entails also the behaviour of consumers on the online market. Online retailers should make full use of this new European framework. How does this market gain the trust of new consumers? In light of these developments, this roundtable will also focus on the protection of customers and the regulation of alternative and online dispute settlement. How to gain the trust of consumers while tapping the potential of retail and E-Commerce?
- Keywords: E-Commerce, digitalisation, internal market, competitiveness, sustainability, growth, supply chain challenges, internet of things, protection of consumers, Consumer Protection Cooperation, alternative dispute settlement, online purchasing

Workshops: 14h15-15h30

Closing Speech: 15h30-16h00

📍 Room: Sax

Topic: Together with CSR Europe, the roundtable on Sustainable Development Goals sets out global targets to address the most pressing current societal and environmental issues. They pose a unique opportunity for Europe to generate real sustainable impact towards an innovative, prosperous and inclusive society. To do this, stakeholders will need to change and re-imagine the way they do businesses because we cannot solve today’s challenges with the same mindset that created them. We will need business transformation from the inside out and extensive collaboration at local, national, European and global level. The SDGs provide a framework for action and a common language to set a direction, communicate and measure impact that is understood by businesses, policy makers and civil society. This conference will focus specifically on the building of human capacity in Europe, circular economy, energy transition and socio-economic development and international supply chains.
